Jaguar

Panthera onca* (Linnaeus, 1758)

Taxonomy

Kingdom-Animalia (Animals)

Phylum-Chordata (Animals with a physically supported dorsal nerve cord)

Class-Mammalia (Endothermic [warm-blooded] vertebrate animals with hair, a muscular diaphragm separating the thoracic and abdominal cavities, that produce milk and, in most cases, that give live birth to their young.)

Order-Carnivora (Mammals with dental, sensory and digestive adaptations specialized for consuming other animals as prey.)

Family-Felidae (Carnivores with physical and behavioral adaptations making them identifiable as cats.)

Genus-Panthera (Traditional big cats, with vocal adaptations allowing them to roar, but not purr. The genus includes lions, tigers, leopards, snow leopards and jaguars.)

Species-Panthera onca (The only American big cat.)

Regional names^{1, 2}:

Jaguar – North America

Jaguar, Jaguareté, Tigre, Yaguar – Spanish-speaking countries

Onça, Onça pintada, Onça cangaçu – Brazil

Otorongo – Peru

Penitigri – Surinam

Tig marqué – French Guiana

Tiger – Belize

Tigre mariposo - Colombia

Balam, Chac-moól, Zac-bolay – modern Maya-speaking regions

The species is called iawa, or iawaraté by several Amazonian native peoples, including the Achuar and Tupi.³ It may be that this is the root that gave rise to the name jaguar.

Description

Physical^{2, 4}

The jaguar is the largest cat in the Americas, with a record weight of over 347 pounds (158kg). The largest jaguars have been found in the Brazilian Pantanal region, where in one study the average weight of males was 220 pounds (100kg). Head and body length, without the tail may be up to six feet (1.85m), and the tail can measure 30 inches (75cm) more. Height at the shoulder may be up to 30 inches (75cm).

The jaguar's coat color ranges from pale yellow to reddish brown, with a much paler (often white) underbelly. It has spots on the neck, body and limbs that form rosettes, which contain black markings within them. On the head and underparts, the spots are simple black dots. Black jaguars are not uncommon, and even they possess darker rosette markings that are visible in bright light.

Compared to a leopard, the jaguar is stocky and more powerfully built. The square jaw and prominent cheeks, along with robust, muscular limbs give evidence of immense strength. It has been said that the jaguar is built for power, not speed. While true, this cat also demonstrates surprising stealth and grace in movement.

Habitat/Distribution^{4, 5, 6, 7}

First appearing in the fossil record around 2 million years ago, the jaguar has been an American species at least that long. Found throughout what is now the southern United States until about 10,000 years ago, it was eliminated from the U.S. around 1900. In the late 1990s, several sightings in Arizona occurred, prompting renewed interest in the jaguar's northernmost habitat and distribution. The southern edge of its range is now in northern Argentina, but once extended into Uruguay.

Range countries: Argentina, Belize, Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, French Guiana, Guatemala, Guyana, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Suriname, United States, Venezuela. Now extinct in El Salvador and Uruguay.

Habitat is variable for the species. It is found from lowland jungle to montane forest, at altitudes of up to 6,500 feet (2,000m) but is seen in wet grassland and arid scrub as well. A preference for water seems evident. The jaguar is an excellent swimmer, and has also been known to patrol ocean beaches preying on buried sea turtle eggs.

Major habitats include Grassland, Lowland tropical rainforest, Montane tropical rainforest, Succulent and thorn scrub, Temperate broadleaf forest, Tropical monsoon and dry forest, Tropical savannah woodland.

Biology^{1, 2, 4, 6}

The jaguar is a primary predator, at the top of any ecological community in which it resides. Capybara and peccaries are usually listed as its major food source, but tapirs, crocodilians, fish, snakes, birds and many additional species of small mammals are taken too. One probable reason that the jaguar occurs over such a wide geographic range and in a broad variety of habitats is that it is equipped to exploit large and small prey, in water and on land. Unlike its African and Asian cousins, the jaguar is noted for killing prey via a crushing bite to the skull. Its large canines and powerful jaws are also able to break open the shells of turtles and tortoises.

One important cause of the species' persecution by humans is its ability to prey on cattle. It is thought that jaguar populations actually grew during the period when cattle ranches were first established in tropical America. For that reason, many large ranches have employed full-time jaguar hunters to prevent losses of cattle.

Jaguars are mature at approximately three years of age. Like tigers and cougars, females seem to inhabit home ranges of about 15 to 23 mi² (25 to 38km²). Ranges overlap somewhat, and resident males inhabit territories about twice that size, patrolling through the ranges of several females at a time. Basically solitary, they come together for breeding. Females have an estrous cycle of approximately four weeks, and can breed at any time of year. Gestation is listed as between 93 and 105 days. Litter size is usually fewer than four cubs. Life expectancy in captivity is among the longest of any cat, and lifespans of 23 years have been recorded.

Due, in large part, to much of the jaguar's range being inaccessible to researchers, much remains to be learned about the biology of the species.

Behavior^{1, 2, 4, 6}

Solitary except when raising cubs, the jaguar patrols its territory or home range searching for food. Traditionally thought of as being nocturnal, radio-collar tracking indicates that jaguars are active around-the-clock but mostly in the hours around sunrise and sunset.

An excellent climber, jaguars make good use of trees. They often drag kills to a secluded or sheltered spot for consumption but do not cover or bury them, as cougars do. It has been said that the jaguar is the only big cat that does not roar, but this is incorrect. The jaguar has an array of vocalizations including mews, grunts and a deep, repetitive "coughing" roar.

Protection and Population Status^{1,7}

- The jaguar is listed under CITES (Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species) Appendix I. This means that all international trade in jaguars or their parts is prohibited.
- The International Union for the Conservation of Nature (IUCN) lists jaguars as Lower Risk, near-threatened.
- US Fish & Wildlife Service lists jaguars as Endangered.
- Major threats to the species are population fragmentation, deforestation and deliberate elimination.
- Overall, the population trend is a decline.
- Specifically in range countries, any hunting of jaguars is prohibited in Argentina, Colombia, French Guiana, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Suriname, United States, Uruguay and Venezuela.
- Hunting of jaguars is restricted to “problem animals” in Brazil, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Mexico and Peru.
- Trophy hunting is permitted in Bolivia.
- The species has no legal protection in Ecuador or Guyana.

Central American populations:

In 1991, Rabinowitz estimated a jaguar population in Belize of 600 to 1000 animals. Aranda estimated in 1990 that 125-180 jaguars were living in Mexico's 4,000 km² (2,400 mi²) Calakmul Biosphere Reserve, and additional 465-550 animals in the adjoining Maya Biosphere Reserve in Guatemala, an area measuring 15,000 km² (9,000 mi²). The same researcher has also estimated that some 350 jaguars may be living in several areas of Chiapas state, Mexico.

Ongoing research at a number of other Mesoamerican sites continues to expand awareness of previously unknown jaguar populations as well.

South American populations:

The Pantanal is a seasonally flooded wetland covering more than 100,000 km² (60,000 mi²) in Brazil, Bolivia and Paraguay. A rough population density estimate by Quigley and Crawshaw, in 1992, of 1.4 resident adults per 100 km² means that only about 1,400 jaguars may exist in that area. Population estimates in the Amazon Basin and Orinoco Basin vary, and are difficult to obtain. In some regions, jaguars are said to be very common and in others the species has disappeared completely. Overall, it seems that jaguars are not in immediate peril of extinction. However, their current geographic range is somewhere between one-third to one-half its historical size.

Importance to people

Economic impact

Since the implementation of CITES in 1975, legal international trade in the pelts of spotted cats has disappeared. The October 2001, issue of National Geographic Magazine quoted cattle ranchers in South America as claiming that certain herds face losses of up to 10 percent due to jaguar predation. The jaguar is often cited as a draw to ecotourism. However, due to its normally reclusive nature jaguars are not seen often by tourists. Tour guides themselves may go years without a sighting (E. Nycander, Rainforest Expeditions, personal communication).

Wildlife in culture^{8, 9, 10, 11}

Jaguars elicit a wide range of responses from people. Through history they have been both deified and vilified. The image of the species has been commercialized more than once. It played an important and varied role in pre-Columbian American culture.

The Maya had the only written language in the Americas before European contact. Both verbal and visual puns played roles in their complex world-view. The name Xbalanque, one of their Hero Twins whose exploits before the creation of humanity explain many natural phenomena, translates literally as “sun’s hidden aspect.” Within his name is a verbal pun on balam, Classic Mayan for “jaguar.” The Jaguar God of the Underworld, responsible for the sun’s nightly passage beneath the earth, is literally the sun’s hidden aspect.

In Quiche Maya lore, three of the first four humans were named B’alam K’itze (Jaguar Cedar), B’alam Aq’ab (Jaguar Night) and Ik’ib’alam (Dark Jaguar).

As a symbol of royal power, a jaguar pelt was often worn by kings. Carved stone stelae depict the presentation of regalia, including helmets in the shape of a jaguar head. As many as fifteen sacrificed jaguars have been discovered in Mayan royal tombs.

Aztec culture also featured animals in art, architecture and religion. Tezcatlipoca, god of darkness and evil-doers, was often disguised as a jaguar. His spotted skin represented the stars in the night sky. The two highest Aztec military orders took as their emblems the top predators of sky and earth: the Orders of the Eagle and Jaguar.

Shamans in many cultures claim the ability to change into animal form. Stealthy and powerful, the jaguar is an often-assumed guise.

Jaguar Studbook Management

SCOPE: This studbook represents the reported history of the jaguar (Panthera onca) within the captive community in North America. Institutions actively participating in this studbook are located in Canada, the United States and México. Institutions and individuals do not have to be a participant in the AZA Jaguar Species Survival Plan to be included in the studbook. All holders of jaguar are invited to participate in the studbook and all data submitted have been entered into the studbook. Some animals outside of North America are included if they have or had offspring or descendents in North America.

CURRENTNESS: This edition of the studbook is current through 30 November 2013. All 47 AZA institutions holding jaguars during the period 30 April 2010 – 30 November 2013 reported to the studbook keeper for the 2013 edition. Most non-AZA holders during the same period reported. Those not reporting have generally been marked lost-to-follow-up, unless a loaning institution reported them still at the institution. Efforts to collect data and keep the studbook current continue between published updates.

A big thank you to everyone that proactively reports any changes (transfers, births, deaths, etc.) to the studbook keeper on an ongoing basis. Updates can be sent electronically to the studbook keeper at sjohnson@livingdesert.org at any time and preferably as soon as possible following the change.

STUDBOOK HISTORY: This regional studbook was approved by the AZA in December 1993 and compiled by Greta McMillan, Knoxville Zoo, through 1998. Ms. McMillan deserves the primary thanks for organizing the initial studbook and keeping it up to date through 1998. Four updates of the studbook were published by Robert Wiese, Fort Worth Zoo, from 1999 - 2005. This is the third update published since 2006 when it was passed to Stacey Johnson, then at Fort Worth Zoo and now at The Living Desert.

DESCRIPTION OF DATA FIELDS:

Stud # - This field indicates a number assigned to each animal in the studbook. This is a permanent number for this animal. New animals recorded into the studbook are assigned chronological numbers by date entered.

Sex - M = male
F = female
? = unknown or unverified

Birth Date – This field indicates the animal’s date of birth. Wild caught animals have an estimated birth date indicated by “ ~ date “. Question marks indicate not enough information available to make an assumption of the age.

Sire/Dam – This field indicates the parents of the animal. “WILD” signifies that the studbook animal was wild caught and its parents were unknown wild individuals. Numbers indicate studbook designation of the parents and that the animal was captive born.

Location – This field documents movement of the individual animal from its first location to its current location or last known location. Location is not always the owner of the animal. The animal is not listed by its owner, but by its physical location. A listing of locations by their assigned abbreviation can be found under the Institutional Listing section.

Date – This field documents when the change of location took place. “ ~ date “ indicates an approximate date. Question marks indicate not enough information available to make an assumption of the age.

Local ID - This field is the animal’s assigned ISIS number, accession number or some other type of official designation at its specific location. “UNK” indicates the information was not available.

Event – This field describes the purpose for moving the animal from location to location.

Name – This field designates the “House” name of the individual animal. Some animals have been given more than one name as they move from location to location.

DATA CONVENTIONS:

1. All jaguar holders within North America are encouraged to report information on their specimens to the studbook keeper. Both public and private jaguars will be tracked.
2. Through 1998 ownership and loans were recorded in the studbook. While institutions obviously will continue to track this information for their own records, this information will not be tracked in the studbook. Tracking such information has negative effects on many of the analyses, as well as legal implications. Jaguars are recorded as being at their physical location.
3. When a participating institution or individual reports an animal received from a non-reporting institution it is given a temporary studbook number in the T9000 series until further information can be obtained from the origin. When the information is obtained or it is obvious the information will not be obtained, the jaguar is given an official studbook number.

4. Beginning in 1999, if an animal is born and transferred to/from a non-reporting institution its estimated transfer date is the day after its true or estimated birth date until it reaches the known, reporting institution.
