INTRODUCTION

Taxonomy

The Southern Black Howler Monkey, Alouatta caraya, is one of 8 species in the genus Alouatta.

Genus: 17991799. Alouatta Lacepede Tabl. Div. Subd. Orders Genres Mammiferes, p.4.

Species: 1812. Humbolt, Rec. Observ. Zool., 1:355

Status of Wild Population

The southern black howler is not regulated by the United States Endangered Species Act. CITES lists the southern black howler as Appendix II. It is listed by the IUCN Red List as Least Concern. Wild populations suffer from many forms of human interference, particularly agricultural practices and deforestation (Merit, 1982). Among the largest of the New World monkeys, howlers are also killed for human consumption.

Distribution of Wild Populations

The southern black howler monkey is found in eastern Bolivia, northern Argentina, Paraguay, Western Uruguay and Southern Brazil (Wolfheim, J.H. Primates of the World. 1983).

Ecology of Wild Population

Southern black howler monkeys are one of the largest of the South American primates. Adult males are black and weigh approximately 15 lbs. (6.7 kg). Females are a tan color and weigh approximately 10 lbs. (4.4 kg). Howler monkeys derive their name from the loud growls and roars they emit due to their greatly enlarged hyoid bone. Southern black howlers are diurnal, spending the greatest amount of their time in the mid to upper canopies of the forests of South America where they consume leaves, fruits and flowers. They live in family groups of 1 male to 1-2 females and their offspring. Black howlers have a life span in captivity, of approximately 20 years. They have a gestation of 180-194 days with an interbirth interval of 7-10 months in seasoned mothers and 12-15 months in newly matured females. When born, the infants of both sexes are yellow or tan in color. The males start turning black when 2 years and are fully black by 3 years of age.

Scope of Studbook

This is the 2010 edition of the International Studbook for the southern black howler monkey. This studbook contains the records for all known southern black howler monkeys in the United States, Europe and some South American institutions. The species has not been held in Australasian zoos to date. Although little data is available at present, they are presumed to be held by additional range country zoos and research centers. Any errors or questions regarding the information in this Studbook should be directed to the Studbook keeper.

Current status of the population in captivity

The data reported in this studbook are current through 1 October 2010. As of that date, the historical population was 384.349.96 (829) animals and the living population was 132.124.12 (272) animals in 61 institutions. This number includes:

- 2.2 (4) animals in 1 institution in the Asian region;
- 0 animals in the Australasian region;
- 69.62.11 (142) animals in 42 institutions in the European region;
- 4.0 (4) animals in 3 institutions in the Latin American region;
- 61.60.1 (122) at 33 institutions in the North American region.

Description of Data Fields

Studbook: Originally numeric studbook numbers were assigned according to the actual or estimated date of birth. With the expansion of the studbook to international status in 1990, new information has become available for previously unreported animals, making it impossible to maintain the chronological order. Studbook numbers are now assigned as the Studbook Keeper receives information

Sex: F for female; M for male; ? for unknown; f for contracepted/neutered female, m for contracepted/neutered male.

Birth Date: For captive born animals, this is the actual date of birth. Birth dates for wild-caught animals were estimated to the nearest month or year. Birth dates for wild-caught animals with no estimated birth date or recorded age and animals with unknown histories are indicated by ?????

Sire and Dam: The parents of each specimen are identified by their studbook numbers. If parents are unknown, they are indicated by "UNK". Wild-born founders are indicated by "WILD".

Location: The location, referenced in the Location Glossary, indicates a specimen's location or owner as of that date..

Date: The date an event occurred. For example, the birth, capture, or transfer of an animal.

Local ID: This is the institution's accession number for a particular specimen. In most cases, this is the same as the institution's ISIS number for that specimen.

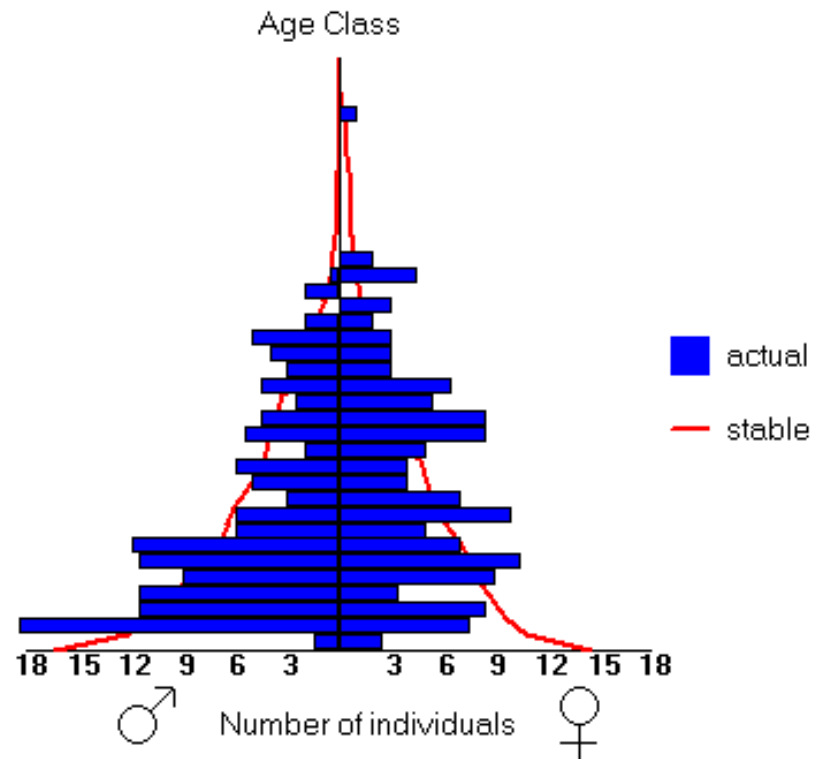

Event: Birth, captures, transfers, loans or deaths.

Name: For those specimens that have been given a house name, the most recently assigned name is listed.

LTF: Specimens transferred to unknown locations or to non-responding institutions and specimens lost, stolen, or disappearing from an institution's records are all recorded as "lost to follow-up" and are indicated by "ltf".

Transponder Number: For those with one, the most recently assigned transponder number is listed.
